

EPOS

It stands for Electronic Point of Sale.

It is also known as electronic cash register.

EPOS helps supermarket to keep their stock up to date. In other words it keeps track of items sold and left in the stock

Following hardware is used at EPOS

- Monitor screen
- Printer
- Barcode reader
- Electronic scale
- Keyboards
- Numeric Keypad
- Touch screens

How computers help supermarket to keep stock up to date?

Product Number	Description	Price	Number in Stock	Reorder Level	Reorder Quantity
6271004913649	KWIK Hand Sanitizer	0.500	1050	100	1000

Answer

1. Barcode of the item is read
2. Database is searched till the match is found
3. Number in stock of the matching item is read
4. Number in stock of the matching item is reduced
5. Number in stock is compared to the reorder level
6. If Number in stock is less or equal to reorder level

7. More items are ordered
8. New Number in stock is written

EFTPOS

It is type of EPOS that gives the facility of paying through debit cards/credit cards. In other words this terminal is capable of transferring funds from one account to another.

Following hardware is used at EFTPOS

- Monitor screen
- Printer
- Barcode reader
- Electronic scale
- Keyboards
- Numeric Keypad
- Touch screens
- Chip and PIN reader
- Magnetic stripe reader
- Contact less smart card

Customer has presented his/her card for payment. The card is now charged. Explain the whole process of this transaction.

Step-1

The card is validated (note: these checks are done by the bank)

- Expiry date
- If reported stolen
- If the card number exists

Step-2

The customers types in the pin and reader compares it with the one stored on chip

Step-3

- Supermarkets computer contacts bank
- Bank checks for sufficient funds
- If funds are sufficient transaction is authorized
- funds will be transferred from customers account to the retailers/supermarkets account
- If funds are insufficient the transactions is declined